Biographical / Historical

The following is a shortened version of Philip Boobbyer's description of the Oxford Group written for the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography.

The Oxford Group was a religious movement initiated by the American pastor Frank Buchman. In the UK it grew out of Buchman's work with students at Oxford University and was initially known as the First Century Christian Fellowship. Moral Re-Armament (MRA) was launched in 1938 as the Oxford Group's programme.

Buchman's religious work with students in Britain, in combination with similar outreach at Princeton and other American colleges, led to the emergence of the First Century Christian Fellowship in the early 1920s. The name changed to the Oxford Group in 1928 when a party of students visiting South Africa was labelled the "Oxford Group" by the press. The Oxford Group was non-denominational, and it spread through fellowship groups and house parties, some of them involving thousands of people. Buchman's emerging spirituality stressed the importance of absolute moral standards, guidance, surrender, restitution, and sharing, as well as the idea that God had a plan for each person's life and for the world.

Although the Oxford Group grew out of Buchman's work with students the movement soon became focused on wider social and political issues. From the late 1920s Buchman increasingly sought to influence national situations through the agency of "changed" individuals. "When man listens God speaks; when man obeys, God acts; when men change, nations change", was how Buchman expressed it in 1938. Oxford Group campaigns in South Africa (1929), Norway (1934–1935), Switzerland (1935), and

Denmark (1935 and 1936) had the wider aim of reaching the countries' leadership.

Moral Re-Armament (MRA) was conceived in the context of the threat of war when Buchman came to the conclusion that the alternative to militarism was "moral and spiritual re-armament". Despite the Oxford Group being formally registered as a public company in 1939, Moral Re-Armament replaced it as the name of the movement over the following years.

Although Moral Re-Armament had British and American roots it established itself after the Second World War as an international organization, with 'teams' operating in many countries, and registered independently according to local law and culture. Reconciliation, in the context of post-war reconstruction, decolonization, and industrial conflict, was one of its main aims. Theatre and film were central in transmitting its ideas. In the UK, the many MRA plays that were put on at the Westminster Theatre were part of a national strategy to influence the country.

Peter Howard became world leader of Moral Re-Armament after Buchman's death in 1961. When he died suddenly in 1965 the leadership of the international work of MRA was exercised more collectively. Although Moral Re-Armament's British work became less publicly visible after Howard's death its efforts to inject moral and spiritual values into national life continued. In 2001 it changed its name to Initiatives of Change, although in the UK it continued to be registered as a charity under the name of the Oxford Group.

Immediate Source of Acquisition

Collection Inventory

Publications, 1919-2013

Scope and Contents

Publications relating to the Oxford Group and Moral Re-Armament or written by members or those associated with the Group.

These were originally arranged in two sections. The first section (now MS. Oxford Group 1/1-69) was arranged alphabetically, mainly by the surname of the author but occasionally by the subject, particularly when the subject was associated with the Oxford Group. The second section (now MS. Oxford Group 1/70-90) was arranged numerically by "folder id" (shelfmark). Both sections are now alphabetical but no attempt has been made to combine the two.

Physical Description: 1 box

Buchman, 1908-2008

Scope and Contents

Correspondence and other papers of and relating to Frank Buchman and the Oxford Group.

The original reference numbers ('folder ids') used by the Oxford Group are noted in square brackets for example, A (general), 1924-1961 [3.0001].

Correspondence, 1909-1980

Scope and Contents

The correspondence has been arranged alphabetically by surname, organisation, country or subject. The entries described as 'general', for example 'A (general)', contain letters from various correspondents. The replies from Buchman and the Oxford Group are mainly carbon copies.

The four boxes in this section labelled Frank Buchman (MS. Oxford Group 3/21-24) contain a little original material but mainly consist of biographical information about Buchman gathered before and after his death.

The two boxes in this section labelled Finance (MS. Oxford Group 3/50-51) contain personal financial papers of Buchman together with financial papers concerning the Oxford Group.

Full Range of Shelfmarks: MS. Oxford Group 3/1-174
